Around 9 ABY, the male Pyke worked as a courier in the Pyke Syndicate during its takeover of the desert planet Tatooine. He and three other Pykes went into Tatooine's Mos Pelgo territories, consulting with his comrades about their cargo of spice and credits over their landspeeder by some moisture vaporators. While they discussed what to do with the cargo, Marshal Cobb Vanth of Mos Pelgo approached the group. The courier reached for his blaster pistol when Vanth told him to think his decision through, the marshal gripping his own pistol.

The courier and his comrades stared at Vanth, who said he ran things in the territories and offered the Pykes a chance to return to the rest of their syndicate without any commotion. Nodding at his colleagues, the courier pretended to abide with the marshal's terms by turned from Vanth. The Pyke then attempted to draw his blaster on Vanth, but the marshal drew quicker and shot down the courier and two of his three comrades as they attempted to make a move on their new adversary. The courier dropped dead to the ground with a groan, and Vanth advised the Pyke's last remaining colleague to flee with a warning for the syndicate.
