Description: Vober Dand was a Tarsunt male from Suntilla who served in the Resistance's Ground Logistics Division as a controller. Around thirty years after the Battle of Endor, he was stationed in the Resistance's base of operations on the planet D'Qar and was present during the preparations and execution of the Resistance's attack on the First Order's Starkiller Base.

During the evacuation of D'Qar, Dand was stationed on the Resistance flagship, Raddus. He was present when Vice Admiral Amilyn Holdo was given command of the Resistance, and listened to her introductory speech.

Minutes before the speech he had been arguing with Resistance Captain Poe Dameron about the best way they could reshuffle the fleet's remaining starfighters to defend the Raddus.

Dand was left as one of the few Resistance members to survive the battle of Crait and started working with his father, Ibdun Dand, who had joined after the Hosnian Cataclysm, as part of the ground crew of the Resistance base on Ajan Kloss in 35 ABY.

After the Resistance and its allies defeated the First Order at the battle of Exegol, Dand celebrated with his father at the Resistance base along with the Kessurian Wilsa Teshlo.

Personality and traits

Dand was a stickler for detail and refused to tolerate anyone in the base operating outside of protocol. He wore a yellow GLD controller's coat with a pair of brown pants and boots as well as a comlink headset. Dand had brown hair, black eyes and gray skin.
