Imperial Intelligence Black Operatives

Within the Galactic Empire most forces are considered conventional and generally operate within the set jurisdictions of the Imperial High Command. A few secretive units within Imperial Intelligence, however, work in the shadows of the Empire and are directly attached to Emperor Palpatine's security advisor. These units are disclosed to only the highest-ranking intelligence officers.

Emperor Palpatine's security advisor is usually a high-positioned Imperial Intelligence officer that has the authority to use whatever force is necessary to maintain stability within the Empire. This includes both external and internal threats. When a situation is deemed a direct threat to the Galactic Empire, and other methods of resolving it are either too risky or too broad, the security advisor can personally requisition a special actions unit.

Recruitment for these operations is highly specialized, and prospects are hand-selected by the commander of the task force. Command of the unit is selected by Ubiquitorate, which keeps constant files on officers with stellar combat records. Most of the men selected are recent graduates of elite units within the Empire, including the Imperial Army's Deipvek Sniper Training Facility and the Stormtrooper Corps' training regime. Men are selected for their loyalty and combat abilities, including knowledge of discretionary warfare and unconventional techniques.

The covert task force consists of approximately ten men, who all are elite-calibre soldiers. After their selection they are sent to a secretive training facility where they are briefed and trained extensively on their current mission and its requirements. Once the training is complete, soldiers are shipped out and deployed to their planetary drop-zones by special dropships designed for covert action. Once the insertion team is on their planet of operations, they are basically on their own.

Some operations are more easily defined than others, such as the assassination of a Rebel leader or the rescue of a group of officers. More often, however, the task force's orders are very basic, allowing the unit to take their own course of action in accomplishing their objectives. They are silent warriors, and operate without support from outside units. Once all the objectives have been completed the team is extracted, often times without the enemy knowing anybody was ever there.

All of the unit's actions are completely secret, with only the security advisor, Ubiquitorate, and the task force knowing of the team's existence. If, during the course of the operation, the unit's secrecy is compromised, all communications to the unit are cut and the unit is subsequently abandoned. While the Imperial High Command condones covert activities, their effect is extreme in most cases. Every day, somewhere in the vast galaxy, an Imperial Intelligence black operation is underway.
