Description: After the destruction of Alderaan a native of that world, Almek Obsidian, became somewhat obsessive about military power, and set up Core Defence Industries (CDI) to supply defence to other worlds so the same could never happen again. However the unbalanced nature of the industrialist and the corporation he founded, led to many headaches for the fledgling New Republic, as the power weapons and vessels were sold to anyone without restriction, meaning that these state of the art weapons of war were available to terrorists, pirates and other criminals. Fortunately, for the New Republic at least, Almek Obsidian died after only a couple of years, and the absence of his genius, although unbalanced, hand at the helm meant that CDI went into receivership shortly afterwards. The CDI Razzi Class Transport is a fast and rugged transport vessel, designed to carry military supplies, and is easily capable of being modified into a troop carrier with a capacity of over a thousand troops packed into its cargo hold. The large capacity of the holds, and the high speed of this vessel has made it extremely popular with pirates and smugglers, who love the easily modifiable design and the military grade electronics fitted into the vessel, even though it is still available at a low price.
