Description: Bilemaws were large quadrupedal creatures that lived on the planet of Koboh. They were covered in a hard exterior, which makes them resistant to most conventional attacks. Additionally, bilemaws could regurgitate acidic spit, known as "bile," to any enemies within their way. Bilemaws made their homes in the many crags, caves, and crevices on the surface of Koboh. They had a notoriously bad temper, leading to rampages that would trample, crush, or pulverize those caught in their way.

Some bilemaws would frequently lounge in pools of volcanic mud that bubbled up through fissures from deep beneath the surface of Koboh. The creatures would get coated in the substance, which would harden into a second skin, reminiscent of the basalt columns where the pools were found.
