

Raman

Raman is a very odd and beautiful planet. Seen from orbit it looks like vibrant ball of blue and green streaked with white.

One entire hemisphere of the planet is nothing but island chains across a vast ocean. It is beleived that once upon a time, Raman had a moon that crashed into the planet, shattering the land mass. The other hemispheer is partialy covered with the coean as well, but is msotlya solid continental land amss then. Much of the continental part of the planet is actually untouched. The people spread themselves out and use many methods of enviromental protection. Akira Armour Co, in return for the tolerance of the people, keep Raman protected form any otusiders who would threaten the beauty of the planet with heavy industry or the like. Solar Power is used as much as possible on Raman, and atmospheric scrubebrs have been setup for any wastses that do manage to get into the air. Out on the island hemipshere a few cities and small towns are setup, but most importantly is Akira Armour Co's headquarters. It is set up on one of the alrger islands, by the beach.

There is a small village right at the edge of the Island's beach. A landing field sits about three hundred meters back form where the village ends. The landing field is just a grassy area with service sheds erected seemingly haphazardly.

Duracrete paths leads from the landing field abck to the town, and further inland to the Akira HQ. The Akira HQ building is nestled against the edge of a dnese jungle. There is a wide grassy, Quad area in front of the building. The front of the building goes up four floors verticaly with unadorned duracrete. From there it slants back towards the forest the further up you go, at a forty-five degree angle. This slanted face of the building is compeltely covered in a grid of durasteel frames suporting polarized transpristeel windows. Along either siuide of the qud, as you approach the Akira building are small bunekrs with motor pools, armouries, sensors and communication bunkers. If it weren't for the beautiful surroundings it would look like a very strong fortified position. All the buildings are made to resist heavy assault.

Unseen are many defenses in the area. Sections of the squad actualy drop away to allow artillery empalcements to rise up on traversing platforms. The complex also had three seperate shield generators, all in underground bunkers. The complex can sustain assault from, land, sea,air,and space. Nobody ahs ever tried to assault the complex yet though.The people of Raman generaly like Akira Armour Co, because they serve just fine as a goverment and keep the outsiders under control. Anyone who actualy comes to Raman is usually surprised by all of this, as it is contrary to typical corporate greed.
