Planets D6 / Unfen

Unfen

Unfen is a small farming world located in the Palvar Sector, not far from Kashan itself. For the most part, Unfen has been highly overlooked by almost everyone and those who even know of its existance think of it as nothing but a backwater world not worth visiting.

Unfen's entire population is centered in one large collection of farms and homes known as the Collective stretches for several hundred kilometers in diameter, the planet's only spaceport located along the northern edge.

The planet itself consists of a supercontinent which is showing signs of breaking up into ten smaller continents over the next hundred million years or so. The Collective is located on the eastern most edge of the continent, only fifty kilometers from Unfen's freshwater super ocean.

On the far side of the super continent is an extremely dense forest which spans thousands upon thousands of square kilometers, separated from the east by a long range of jagged mountains. The Palvar Defense Force has secretly placed a small military outpost in the center of this forest which consists of no more than a single room listening post with a shuttle landing pad on the roof. Surrounding the outpost is a tall electrified razor wire fence to prevent the large predators such as the yeto which could easily tear a man limb-from-limb.
