Republic Medium Repulsortank

The medium Republic repulsortank was a limited production command vehicle. It had enough room and crew space to fit a driver, gunner, lieutenant and sergeant major, and the communication equipment necessary for command of armor units. Platoon officers used these in the field to keep close command of their units.

While designed and produced in quantities only sufficient to serve as platoon command vehicles, the medium repulsortanks were often thrown directly into a fight along side the light and heavy repulsortanks.
