Description: The Heavy Assault Droid is an offshoot of the Dwarf Spider Droid design. With a quad laser cannon turret slung below its body, it had impressive firepower, as well as heavier armour. The real revolution in this design was the electromagentically rotated globe at the end of each leg, switching from walking to using these as a drive system, the droid could accelerate itself on smooth surfaces to extremely high speeds without sacrificing its all terrain capabilities when it returned to walking. These droids were introduced late in the Clone Wars, and were soon deactivated by Anakin Skywalker after he assassinated the ruling body of the Confederacy.
