DESCRIPTION:

???The M831 Troop Transport, abbreviated as M831 TT and commonly known as the Troop Transport, is a United Nations Space Command ground vehicle based off the chassis of the M12 Light Reconnaissance Vehicle.

???The M831 Troop Transport is essentially the troop transport variant of the M12 Light Reconnaissance Vehicle. It contains neither a M41 LAAG, a 102mm SC-HE Rocket Turret, a M68 Gauss Cannon, nor a M79 Multiple Launch Rocket System. The M831 TT provides supplementary room for several personnel in the rear section along with one driver and a passenger in the front seat.

?? The Troop Transport relies on its passengers for defense and offense. Because of this, it is normally considered far less powerful than its counterparts. The usage of a troop compartment instead of a turret is both an advantage and a disadvantage: more allies will die should the vehicle be destroyed, but multiple targets can be counterattacked at the same time (albeit with less overall force). Also, its roll cage appears to be made of several metal beams, unlike normal roll cages.
