Description: Plif was a male Hoojib, native to the forests of the planet Arbra. Like all Hoojibs, Plif had the ability to telepathically communicate with other sentient species. He also possessed the ability to partially perceive the thought processes of lower-order non-sentient species, such as Sliviliths. Communication with such creatures was practically impossible, however, and the only mental impressions Plif could perceive from one were in the forms of vague, emotional images. Possessing a sharp mental acuity, Plif was the spokesmind for his Hoojib tribe of Arbra, and was commonly regarded as their unofficial leader.

As their leader, Plif founded a strong support base for an Arbran government, and, as such, Arbra became one of the founding members of the Alliance of Free Planets, the short-lived successor to the Alliance to Restore the Republic. In his role as de facto head of state, Plif actively participated in military actions against the forces of the Galactic Empire, the Nagai, and the Tofs. He was constantly paired up with Jedi Knight Luke Skywalker in commando raids and expeditions during the Nagai–Tof War tour of duty, and even led his fellow Hoojibs into battle on several occasions. When the Alliance became the New Republic, Plif continued to represent the Hoojibs' interests to the new government.

Personality and traits

Plif was a fiercely proud Hoojib, whose top priority was always the well-being of his people. He led them, without fear, through the adversity of a nomadic lifestyle, into combat, and into politics. He revolutionized Arbra's hierarchy and status within the galaxy, effectively putting it on the map with his extended and expanded involvement within the Alliance to Restore the Republic and its successive incarnations. He was not afraid to go into combat for the Alliance, despite the lack of a formal commission. He would often use his charisma to rally his fellow Hoojibs in a time of need, and would use his telepathy to both gauge the enemy, and communicate secretly with his allies.
