Description: Neeku Vozo was a Kadas'sa'Nikto male mechanic who served as a member of Team Fireball on the Colossus. Neeku befriended the undercover Resistance spy Kazuda Xiono during his mission on the Colossus to investigate First Order influence.

Neeku Vozo came from a long line of bantha herders and was a sort of prodigy amongst his tribe. At some point, Neeku had a pet named Lucky, who reminded him of his home. Lucky eventually died, and Vozo subsequently ate it.

During the New Republic era, Neeku Vozo had found work as a mechanic at the former New Republic starfighter pilot Jarek Yeager's repair shop on the Colossus, a refueling platform on the Outer Rim ocean world of Castilon. He worked alongside the female human Tamara Ryvora and the astromech droid R1-J5 "Bucket."

Personality and traits

Neeku Vozo was a male Kadas'sa'Nikto with black eyes and green skin. He interpreted everything very literally. Neeku easily befriended people but his tendency to interpret things literally could cause confusion and trouble. While Neeku was initially upset that Kaz was "not the best starfighter pilot in the galaxy", he forgave him after Kaz took part in a race with Torra Doza. Though Kaz lost and even crashed his ship, Neeku regarded Kaz as an exceptional pilot since he escaped uninjured.

While the rest of Team Fireball initially resented or barely tolerated Kaz's presence, Neeku went out of his way to befriend Kaz despite the latter's lack of mechanical skills. Neeku also recognized that the seemingly charismatic racer Jace Rucklin and his associates were idle and unscrupulous troublemakers. His warning was proven right when Rucklin took advantage of his friendship with Kaz to steal a bottle of volatile hyperfuel.

Neeku was friendly and approachable. He often sought to help others by Neeku but in the process annoyed them or made the situation worse. On one occasion, he tried to chat with First Order stormtroopers in order to solicit information on Kaz's behalf. Neeku was also a kind-hearted individual and once treated the cash-strapped Kaz for a glass of water. As a discreet observer, Neeku told Kaz that he would not make a good bounty hunter due to the ethical implications of the job.

Skills and abilities

Neeku Vozo was a skilled mechanic who was familiar with repairing starships and the dangers of hyperfuel. Neeku was familiar with comlinks but annoyed Kaz by using it in the same room Besides speaking Galactic Basic, Neeku could also speak several languages including the Chelidae language and the Nikto language Cracek.
