

Kashan Trench Mortar

During the Kashan-MetaCorp conflict within the Palar Sector, trench warfare returned. On multiple planets, both sides dug trenches and built bunkes and sat in a deadlocked conflict. Both sides probed each other while trying to defend against them, looking for a weakness that could gain victory. Mortars had been used for many millenia throughout the galaxy, and were a timeless weapon. Trench Mortars were designed to destroy enemy trenches, bunkers, dugouts, and foxholes.

The shells were the size of 50 gallon drums and could be lobbed over large distances. Due to their size the mrotars must be loaded by two people then operated by a firer and a spotter, therefor a total crew of four is required to use it. High explosive rounds can be used, and sent over farther distance to knock out enemy fortifications and emplacements, or the shorter ranged shrapnel shells can be fired into the trenches to kill large ammounts of enemy troops.
