Creatures D6 / Tooka (Non-sentient Feline)

Name: Tooka
Type: Non-sentient Feline

Dexterity: 2D
Perception: 2D
Strength: 1D

Special Abilities
Fangs: Tooka have a mouth filled with sharp fangs, which do +1D damage when used to attack.

Average height: .56 meters
Average length: .94 meters
Skin color: Violet, greenish blue, yellow, fawn, dark yellow, brown, red
Distinctions: Large mouth, pointed ears, thick tail
Move: 12
Orneriness: 2D

Description: Tookas, also called tooka-cats, were a subspecies of feline cats. They were often kept as pets, but were also considered by many to be feral nuisances. When properly trained, they could be excellent hunters of pests. One specific breed of tooka was the Loth-cat, native to the planet Lothal. Tooka were known to enjoy milk. Tooka were common in the underworld of Coruscant, where they hunted Nuna.

Tookas can be a variety of colors, such as violets, greenish blues, yellows, fawns, dark yellow, brown, deep purple and blue-gray. They usually have a flat face with a slightly protruding muzzle. They have two slit nostrils that sit underneath a pair of beady gray or black eyes. They have very long mouths that stretch all the way across their face and can open wide to display long sharp fangs. They have a pair of very tall, pointy ears that are usually striped. Their neck is rather short, as are their legs, and their paws are very similar to a bird's talons. Their claws are adept at gripping their prey and climbing. Their tails are fat and bushy and usually striped, and their underbelly is usually a different color that the body. They are very similar to their subspecies Loth-cats. When angry, threatened or scared tookas can dilate their entire eyes and arch their backs like cats.

Stats by FreddyB, descriptive text from Wookieepedia.
Image copyright LucasArts.
Any complaints, writs for copyright abuse, etc should be addressed to the Webmaster FreddyB.