StormElite 37mm Anti-Starfighter Blaster Cannon

The 37mm Anti-Starfighter Blaster Cannon is an upgunned model of the widely successful 20mm Assault Blaster Cannon. Although the 20mm ABC was quite capable of taking out a starfighter, the 37mm is more well versed for anti-starfighter duties.

The 37mm Anti-Starfighter Blaster Cannon is used by Imperial StormElite, Imperial Army, and ground-stationed Imperial Navy defensive batteries. In the Imperial StormElite, for example, four batteries of two 37mm cannons are attached to each SE division's artillery regiment. Most 37mm Anti-Starfighter Blaster Cannons are used to defend StormElite field bases and medical aid posts.

It is not correct to say that the 37mm Anti-Starfighter Blaster Cannon cannot be used in an offensive, anti-personnel capacity. One such example would be SE-Captain Verdict Maraudey's use of the cannon against Rebel soldiers during an engagement on Chandrila. Maraudey's company approached a village that was held by a group of wilderness fighters and instead of assaulting them directly he opened up with his lone 37mm Anti-Starfighter Blaster Cannon. Alliance medical reports indicate that some dead soldiers had 8cm wide blast points in their backs where the blast bolt exited!
