Model: Mandalorian Force-wielder prison

Rules: Although easy to operate and open from the outside, the Mandalorian Force-wielder prison is impossible to open from the inside, and restrains the person inside from moving or speaking. It also provides a barrier against the force being used from inside. Anyone inside must make a Heroic Concentration check to use any force power, and even then receives a 5D penalty to their Force Skills.

Description: A prison device was utilized by the warriors of the planet Mandalore to contain captured Force-sensitives. The Mandalorians used these devices in the years prior to the Clone Wars to imprison Knights of the Jedi Order, though they were eventually outlawed by Duchess Satine Kryze, who ushered in an era of peace for her war-stricken planet. By 19 BBY, only one prison remained. Following the Siege of Mandalore in that same year, this last device was used to transport the world's despot ruler Maul from Mandalore's capital city Sundari to a Venator-class Star Destroyer scheduled to deliver the rogue dark sider to the planet Coruscant.

While the ship was en route to the Core Worlds, however, Supreme Chancellor Sheev Palpatine delivered Order 66 to the commanders of the Clone Army, instructing them to execute all Jedi. Clone Commander Rex of the 501st Legion dispatched two clone troopers to execute Maul as well, but they were subdued by the former Padawan Ahsoka Tano, who freed Maul from his prison so that he could serve as a distraction while she escaped the clones.
