Description: The Shaadlar-type troopship was a series of military personnel carriers used by the Mandalorian Crusaders and Mandalorian Neo-Crusaders.

The Shaadlar-type was based on a Basilisk design and had a gruesome insectoid appearance. They were capable of landing troops on planetary surfaces, where the four "legs" extended to support the weight of the ship itself. Modified through generations, later model troopships were less insectoid in appearance, and had six legs situated underneath the main bulk of the vessel.

The various models were armed with ion cannons, as well as concussion missile launchers. Although the concussion missile launchers were primarily for ground bombardments, they could be reconfigured to fire at targets in space.

History
The troopships were used during the Great Sith War and the Mandalorian Wars, assaulting planets once orbital positions had been established.
