Special Abilities:

Long curving Neck: Their avian heritage gives the Phuii a long curving neck which gives their head a greater range of movement than most species. This gives them a bonus 1D on Perception tests.

Celerity: Their avian heritage means that Phuii are more used to moving at speed through the air than most species. This gives them a bonus +1D on Repulsorlift operations rolls.

Story Factors:

Jedi Mistrust: The Phuii people do not trust Jedi, believing them to be child kidnappers due to their history of taking force sensitive children away for training.

Dagoyan Practices: The Phuii are a deeply spiritual people with a connection to the force. and a tradition of studying the force completely separate to the Jedi and Sith, Dagoyan. The Dagoyan practices of peace, meditation, and contemplation have become socially entrenched in the culture of Bardotta.

Description: Mars Guo was a male Phuii who piloted podracers. He had a propensity for heavy drinking and pretty women, and his loud mouth frequently got him into trouble. He would often pick fights with the local riffraff of Mos Espa despite his diminutive stature, which constantly led to his own defeat.

Biography
Mars wasn't the best podracer on the circuit, but he had made quite a name for himself in the minor rim leagues, and he felt confident that he could pull off a victory in the Boonta Eve Classic. Unfortunately, he made the mistake of imbibing one too many drinks at Boles Roor's glimmik concert the previous night, and the even worse mistake of hitting on one of Sebulba's Twi'lek masseuses, Ann Gella. The Veknoid Teemto Pagalies, who had long been infatuated with Ann, overheard this encounter.

Outraged, he reported the incident to Sebulba the next day, who responded by subtly sabotaging Guo's podracer. During the second lap, Sebulba was vexed by the fact that Guo's Collor Pondrat Plug-2 Behemoth was still in the running, and to finish the matter he broke off a small bit of his pod and tossed it behind him into one of Guo's colossal engines. The craft was shattered and Guo's pod was sent flying.

Many believed this was the end of the swaggering Phuii pilot, but Mars managed to survive and limped back to his home planet of Phu, but unfortunately wasn't able to buy Ann Gella. However, while he was being attended in a medcenter, a bitter Sebulba persuaded race officials to put all of Guo's belongings to be auctioned, including his two enslaved Rodian mechanics, Pax and Trax Bonkik, although Pax was purchased by Teemto Pagalies prior to the auction. It was a long time before he showed up on the podracing circuit again.
