Description: Duke Kayo Organa was a human male member of the House of Organa. In 9 BBY, he and his family—his wife Celly and son Niano—traveled to the planet Alderaan to visit Celly's sister, Breha Organa, and her family. While on Alderaan, Kayo enjoyed the food at the Royal Palace and conversed with Breha's husband, Bail.

Biography
Duke Kayo Organa was a human male of the House of Organa who was married to Celly Organa. The two had a child named Niano. At some point, he confided in his son that his niece, Princess Leia Organa, was adopted—and therefore, in his eyes, not a "real" Organa. He also claimed that she was kept a secret by her always staying on her homeworld of Alderaan. In 9 BBY, Kayo and his family visited the family of Celly's sister and his sister-in-law, Queen Breha Organa of the planet Alderaan. Arriving via starship, Kayo, Celly, and Niano greeted Breha's family at a dock and then made their way to the Royal Palace of Alderaan.

While at the palace, Kayo talked with Breha and her husband, Senator Bail Organa, regarding pros and cons of the Galactic Empire versus the Galactic Republic. Kayo was happy that his profits were good, but Bail was more concerned with slave labor and unjust taxation in the Outer Rim Territories; Kayo, on the other hand, was more interested in Bail's food than slaves. Also at the party, Niano restated the claims that his father had made to Leia, who shot back that Niano only repeated his father's words in an effort to gain his respect even if he did not fully understand them. She further explained that Niano did this out of an attempt to make others scared of him, although in reality, he was really scared of others more.

Personality and traits
Kayo Organa was more interested in enjoying the profits that the Empire granted him than discussing the issues of the galaxy, encouraging his senator brother-in-law to save such debate for the Imperial Senate. He had black hair, brown eyes, and tan skin.
