Description: The Fourth Sister, formerly known as Lyn Rakish, was a Force-sensitive humanoid female member of the Inquisitorius during the Imperial Era. Once a Jedi herself, the Fourth Sister recruited fallen Jedi Barriss Offee into the Inquisitorius, although Offee eventually abandoned the group while on a mission with the Fourth Sister to find a rogue Jedi.

The Fourth Sister also participated in the hunt for Obi-Wan Kenobi in 9 BBY, joining fellow Inquisitors to search for the Jedi Master on the planets Daiyu and Mapuzo and failing to prevent Kenobi's escape from the Fortress Inquisitorius.

Eventually, the Fourth Sister located Offee, who encouraged her to leave the Empire behind after the Fourth Sister severely wounded her. During the imprisonment of Rebel Alliance Lieutenant Thom Hudd, the Fourth Sister was impersonated by Rebel Commander Lina Graf, who managed to rescue Hudd.

Biography

Fallen Jedi

Lyn Rakish was a female individual who served as a Jedi of the Jedi Order. After Order 66, she fell to the dark side of the Force and willingly became the Fourth Sister in the Galactic Empire's Inquisitorius, who served the Sith as an extension of Darth Sidious and Darth Vader's will.

Recruiting Barriss Offee

Rakish, by then known as the Fourth Sister, visited Barriss Offee at the Imperial Inspectorate HQ accompanied by two Imperial clone shock troopers and offered her a chance to join the newly established Empire's Inquisitorius. Barriss became an Inquisitor after killing her opponent but she became disillusioned with the cruelty of the Empire and abandoned the Inquisitorius as pushing the Fourth Sister with the Force while they chased a Jedi.

Hunting Obi-Wan Kenobi

In 9 BBY, after the Third Sister hired Vect Nokru and his mercenaries to kidnap the Alderaanian Princess Leia Organa and bring her to Daiyu in hopes that Jedi Master Obi-Wan Kenobi would be contacted by Leia's adoptive father, Imperial Senator Bail Prestor Organa, to rescue her. The Fourth Sister and the Fifth Brother accompanied the Grand Inquisitor to capture Kenobi. Once they met with the Third Sister on Daiyu, the Grand Inquisitor chastised her for kidnapping a senator's daughter and dismissed her from the mission. After the inquisitors secured the city, The Fourth Sister showed the Grand Inquisitor a bounty hunter alert advertising a bounty placed on Kenobi's head, leading the Grand Inquisitor to deduce that the Third Sister had acted behind his back once again. She later went to examine a crowd of civilians.

After the supposed death of the Grand Inquisitor on Daiyu, the Fourth Sister was present at Fortress Inquisitorius along with the Fifth Brother when the Third Sister arrived to inform them of the location of Kenobi. The Fourth Sister claimed that the Jedi Master could be anywhere, but the Third Sister demanded the probe droids to be sent out to pinpoint Obi-Wan's locations as she got orders from Darth Vader himself. The Inquisitors later had another meeting at the fortress where they confirmed that Kenobi was at Mapuzo, a mining planet on the Mid Rim. The Fourth Sister then ordered a group of Imperial officers to gather their stormtroopers and shut down every single port at the planet. The Fourth Sister and her fellow Inquisitors arrived along with Darth Vader at a nearby settlement on Mapuzo, while the Sith Lord started terrorizing civilians in order to draw Kenobi out, the Inquisitors had the task of sweeping the town and search for others. After Vader had a brief duel with Obi-Wan on a quarry where the Jedi Master managed to escape, the Fourth Sister informed the Fifth Brother that their new orders were to sweep the planet.

The Fourth Sister was present along with the Fifth Brother during the infiltration of the Fortress Inquisitorius by Obi-Wan Kenobi though they failed to prevent his escape. Later she and a pleased Fifth Brother witnessed Darth Vader's rage against the Third Sister because of her apparent failure and the Jedi’s seeming success in penetrating and escaping the Fortress, but the Sith spared her life when she told him it was in reality part of her plan to track Leia and the Jedi by inserting a restraining bolt on Leia’s droid L0-LA59.

A way out
While continuing to serve the Inquisitorius, the Fourth Sister found Offee on a cold world. She chased Offee into a cave system and stabbed her, but found herself lost in the tunnels. Offee offerred forgiveness and encouraged the Fourth Sister to leave behind her Inquisitor persona and become Rakish again. Offee insisted that there was both a way out of the cave and a way out of the Empire for Rakish. After leaving her Inquisitor lightsaber behind and with Offee's guidance, Rakish navigated out of the cave while carrying Offee's body.

Impersonation
The fate of the Fourth Sister was ultimately unknown. At some point following a mission to the Outer Rim by members of the Rebel Alliance, the Fourth Sister lost her armor to Rebel Alliance Commander Lina Graf. Other than the fact that the Inquisitor's armor was in Graf's possession, nothing was known about the fate of the Fourth Sister to the wider galaxy. Graf, wearing the Fourth Sister's armor, impersonated her and infiltrated Fortress Vader on Mustafar where Rebel Lieutenant Thom Hudd was being held prisoner by Darth Vader's aide, Vaneé.

After talking and fighting with the Fourth Sister, Vaneé realized that it was not her, but that it was Graf. Vaneé told her that he knew because she was not carrying a lightsaber, and managed to briefly defeat her. Graf, however, regained the upper hand and along with Hudd, managed to escape Mustafar.

Personality and traits
The Fourth Sister hunted down serving Jedi mercilessly. She respected the Grand Inquisitor's wishes, having a no-nonsense attitude when it came to abiding orders or giving them. Like most Inquisitors, she was terrified of Lord Vader, quickly stepping back when he angrily arrived to punish Third Sister for her failure. According to the Thirteenth Sister, the Fourth Sister's mind seemed to always be elsewhere, making her unavailable for sparring sessions with her fellow inquisitors.

Skills and abilities

Like all other Inquisitors, the Fourth Sister was trained in the use of the double-bladed spinning lightsaber and employed an aggressive and acrobatic lightsaber style. She frequently wielded both blades of the weapon rather than as a single saber.

Equipment

The Fourth Sister was equipped with her own dark colored Inquisitor uniform, and carried a double-bladed spinning lightsaber. When impersonating Fourth Sister, Lina Graf wore a helmet that had a red T-shaped visor. However, she lacked a lightsaber like the Fourth Sister carried, leading Vaneé to realize she was an imposter.
