Description: R3-Y2 was an R3-series astromech droid that served in the Alliance to Restore the Republic during the Galactic Civil War. It was stationed in the command center of Echo Base, the Alliance's headquarters on the planet Hoth. After the base was discovered by the Galactic Empire, R3-Y2 helped to evacuate the rebel forces stationed there during the Battle of Hoth.

Biography
During the Galactic Civil War, R3-Y2 served in the Alliance to Restore the Republic and was stationed in the command center of Echo Base, the Alliance's secret headquarters on the planet Hoth. Shortly before the Battle of Hoth in 3 ABY, R3-Y2 stood by one of the command center's display panels when Captain Han Solo entered the room and passed by the droid while searching for General Carlist Rieekan.

The droid later stood by the base's senior controller, Wyron Serper, when he reported to Solo and Rieekan on signals coming from the Imperial Viper probe droid XJ9-CS14, which had landed nearby. The probe droid's discovery of the rebels on Hoth led to the Empire attacking Echo Base. During the ensuing battle, R3-Y2 helped to evacuate the base's personnel, most of whom successfully escaped the base before it was captured by the Empire.

Characteristics

R3-Y2 was an R3-series astromech droid that was manufactured by Industrial Automaton and stood 1.09 meters tall. The R-series astromech droid had a transparent dome with gold panels and a white chassis.
