Description: The Klatooine paddy frog was one of Jabba the Hutt's favorite snacks. In his palace, Jabba kept a special aquarium to the left of his dais in which the creatures were kept along with other amphibious delicacies. As with gorgs, the Hutt preferred to keep these creatures alive for consumption.

Jabba's chef Porcellus placed the frogs in flavored brandy to suppress their natural aggression.

Biology and appearance
The Klatooine paddy frog had a green lower body, a reddish-brown head, and opaque eyes. It possessed external gills to aid it in breathing underwater. When panicking, such as when about to be eaten, it uttered a high-pitched scream.
