Character Bio - She has always brought shame upon us. In terms of combat, she is the least among us. Her stance always had too much passion about it.

Brianna and her five older half-sisters tended to Jedi Master Atris at the Telos Polar Academy. She was the daughter of the master Echani combatant Yusanis and Jedi Knight Arren Kae, who fought together during the Mandalorian Wars.

The offspring of Echani typically bear the image of their parents, but Brianna looked different from her sisters since she had a different mother, Arren Kae, who died during the Mandalorian Wars.

The combat style utilized by the Handmaidens survived over the centuries until it was eventually used by Emperor Palpatine's Redguards.

Brianna joins the Exile only if he is male.

When the Exile met Atris on the Polar Academy, Brianna snuck aboard the Ebon Hawk at Atris' bidding. Brianna, known to the Exile only as "The Handmaiden", sparred with him three times, teaching him the basics of the Echani martial form and philosophy.

Over time, the two grew close, and the Exile learned of the Handmaiden's heritage as an offspring of a Jedi Knight. A short time later, the Handmaiden let the Exile teach her the ways of the Jedi, breaking her oath to her sisters and to Atris.

When the Exile was nearly killed in the ruined Jedi enclave on Dantooine, the Handmaiden believed him to be dead, and took Kreia back to Atris at Kreia's bidding. Upon arriving, the Handmaiden was attacked by her five half-sisters, who tried to kill her for breaking her oath. She was forced to kill them in self defense. Atris herself then tried to kill Brianna, and almost succeeded if it were not for the intervention of the Jedi Exile, who defeated Atris in a duel, but spared her life.

Brianna revealed her true name to the Exile before he went off to fight Darth Nihilus and follow Kreia to Trayus Academy.

After the Exile went to find Revan, Brianna helped to reform the Jedi Order and followed Atris' path and became a scholar.
