Description: Darth Maul's legs lay on the ground, severed from his body. The Sith Lord had been defeated by Obi-Wan Kenobi, and his legs were now nothing more than a pair of twitching stumps.

But the legs were not dead. They were still alive, and they were still loyal to Darth Maul. They began to move, slowly at first, then with more and more speed. They crawled across the ground, leaving a trail of blood in their wake.

The legs found their way to a dark alleyway, where they hid themselves away. They began to grow, their muscles and bones expanding and transforming and fusing with the broken lightsaber which had fallen with them. Soon, they were no longer just legs. They were a creature of their own, a creature of darkness and hatred.

The creature emerged from the alleyway, its lightsaber held aloft. It began to hunt, seeking out those who had wronged Darth Maul. It killed without mercy, its lightsaber cutting through flesh and bone with ease.

The creature soon became known as the Maul Beast. It was a feared and hated creature, and its name struck terror into the hearts of those who knew of it.

The Maul Beast continued to hunt, its rage growing with each kill. It was determined to avenge Darth Maul, and it would not stop until all those who had wronged him were dead.

One day, the Maul Beast came across Obi-Wan Kenobi. The Jedi Master was on a mission to find and destroy the creature, and he knew that this would be a difficult task.

The two of them fought for hours, neither one able to gain an advantage. Finally, Obi-Wan saw an opening, and he struck. His lightsaber sliced through the Maul Beast's lightsaber, and the creature was disarmed.

Obi-Wan then struck the creature down, ending its reign of terror. But even in death, the Maul Beast's hatred lived on. Its spirit would haunt Obi-Wan for many years to come.
