Description: Phee Genoa was a female human pirate and associate of the Mantellian information broker Ciddarin Scaleback during the early Imperial Era. Scaleback considered Genoa to be the most trustworthy pirate she knew. At some point, she found the Belmont diadem.

In 19 BBY, Genoa met Clone Force 99, also known as "the Bad Batch", a group of clone deserters. After observing its variety, Genoa briefly flirted with one of its members, Tech. After the Bad Batch went to Serolonis, the young clone Omega discovered a compass in a junkyard. When Phee Genoa inspected the compass, she used her droid MEL-221 and discovered coordinates to the Kaldar Trinary system, an uncharted system. Accompanied by the clones, Genoa travelled to the system and found the Heart of the Mountain, a valuable crystalline artifact, which ended up being the key to activating Skara Nal, a dangerous ancient walker and superweapon.

Around 18 BBY, Genoa took Clone Force 99 to her adopted homeworld, Pabu. On a remote island, she introduced the clones to mayor Shep Hazard and his daughter Lyana. When the island suffered from a sea surge, Genoa helped its residents evacuate to Upper Pabu with the help of the Bad Batch. When the clones were forced to leave the island to go on a covert mission to Eriadu, Genoa hinted at her feelings for Tech and asked the clone not to see any other pirate or smuggler while he was gone, both unaware of the fate he would soon meet.
