Description: A green-skinned humanoid male Force-sensitive served the Galactic Empire as an Inquisitor in the time following Order 66, hunting down the Jedi that remained. The Inquisitor was dispatched to the desert world of Golak, chasing rumors of a girl with "special powers". Pursuing the Force-sensitive villager Rani and her brother Charuk to the settlement where they were sheltering from a sandstorm, the Inquisitor interrogated the siblings, but was stopped by the intervention of the fugitive Jedi Rugal, who, after a brief duel, killed the Inquisitor by slitting his throat with one of her lightsabers.

Personality and traits

The Inquisitor was a ruthless and cruel individual, who relished his work for the Empire. This included the slaughter of an entire village of farmers, from which the Inquisitor took pride in the fact that he left no survivors. Sadistic and arrogant, he was willing to deprive Rani of food when he knew she was hungry, and dismissed Rugal as a "dim-witted crone", before realizing that she was, in fact, a Jedi.

A member of an unidentified humanoid species, the Inquisitor possessed teal-green skin, red eyes, and had two small cranial horns, which he kept concealed beneath the black hood of his uniform. He also sported a thick black mustache and soul patch, and had three small, vertical scars beneath his left eye.

Equipment

The Inquisitor wore a grey tunic beneath black armor with gold embellishments, including the Imperial crest on his shoulder epaulets. Like most members of the Inquisitorius, he wielded a red double-bladed spinning lightsaber, which he carried on the backplate of his armor when not in use. He was accompanied in the course of his duties by two Purge Troopers.
