Special Abilities:

Plant Manipulation: The Lonto have the ability to control the growth of plants and to manipulate various aspects of the plant, such as the amount of useful healing sap produced by Tragia Leaves, or the amount of fruit that a tree might bear. Depending on what they intend to do, the Gamesmaster sets a target number for the difficulty, so causing a tree to double it's size might require a Heroic roll, to get it to spontaneously grow fruit Difficult, but for these effects to take place over a longer period or have a lesser effect, then the target number might be as low as easy. The Lonto then must make a WIllpower or Control (if they have it) roll against this target number for their ability to work.

Story Factors:

Natural Force Users: All Lonto have the ability to use the force and are Force Sensitive, even if untrained they have access to the Plant Manipulation ability above. As such they were hunted to near extinction during the Imperial Era.

Force Sensitive: Y
Force Points: 2
Dark Side Points: 2
Character Points: 3

Equipment: Concealed Heavy Blaster Pistol (5D), Concealed Knife (STR+1D), Robes, Respirator Mask, Fast Growing Vines (Lycos uses these for Melee Combat, where they do Str+1D damage, flowing from his arms to strike targets)

Description: Brother Lycos was a Lonto male Child of the Storm who acted as a bodyguard to the Nihil envoy Affanar when the envoy met with the Hutt Skarabda on the planet Ballum. He lead a Nameless off the envoy ship, and briefly traded blows with Skarabda's enforcer. Shortly thereafter, the Republic Longbeam Gios arrived, and Lycos unleashed the Nameless to disorient the Jedi landing force as well as those flying Jedi Vectors.
Lycos was able to jump high and punch through the hull of a Vector. He also wielded plantlike vines from the sleeves of his robes. At times, he appeared to float above the ground without legs, while other times he appeared to have two humanoid legs. He wore a mask covering his entire face except eyes and long, pointed ears.
