Starships D6 / 47 Lightsaber Nullifier

Name: 47 Lightsaber Nullifier
Type: Field generator
Creators: Klerin Chekkat
Locations: Dynamo, Valo, Cacophony
Material(s): Recainium core
Purpose: Disrupting energy weapons, including lightsabers
Affiliation: Nihil
Scale: Character
Skill: Starship Gunnery: 47 Lightsaber Nullifier
Ammo: Diverts power from all ship systems, putting most onto reserve power, for each round roll 1D6+{the number of rounds the system has been operating}, against 25 (the D6 explodes on a 6). If the roll is higher then reserve power fails, and the ships systems fail unless the Nullifier is shut down.
Cost: Unknown
Difficulty: Moderate
Space Range: 1-12/24/40
Atmosphere Range: 100-2400/4800/8000
Damage: 0D
Game Notes: When used, the device nullifies all Blasters and Lightsabers within short range (up to 2.4km), if a Blaster or Lightsaber is in long range (up to 4.8km) roll 1D6, and on 1-4 the weapon is nullified, and if a Blaster or Lightsaber is in extreme range (8km) then roll 1D6, and on a 1-2 the weapon is nullified. The effect lasts until the device is deactivated, but it is not a visible effect, so it may not be immediately evident when the device is shut down.

Description: The 47 lightsaber nullifier, also known as simply the four-seven nullifier or lightsaber stifling technology, was a prototype device that disrupted energy weapons, including blasters and Jedi lightsabers, preventing them from working. It was powered by a core made of recainium, a dangerous and illegal substance. A prototype of the device was created by Klerin Chekkat during the High Republic Era, though her mother, Mantessa, took the credit for it. The elder Chekkat took the prototype to the Republic Fair on the planet Valo, hoping to sell the device to Galactic Republic senator Tia Toon, who had been pushing for the Jedi Order to not be the sole protectors of the Republic. Chekkat believed that Toon would want the device for its abilities to disarm Jedi; however, Toon's position did not mean he opposed the Jedi, and the senator turned down the offer. The device's recainium core also spread radiation into the surrounding area, and Toon had Chekkat disable the device. When the Nihil marauders attacked the fair, Klerin Chekkat claimed to the Republic that the raiders had taken the plans for the device, subsequently attempting to sell the Nihil a smaller, tolium-powered version.

The Nihil warlord Melis Shryke utilized a 47 lightsaber nullifier on her Stormship, the Cacophony, when she captured the Jedi Grand Master Pra-Tre Veter, though she destroyed it in the process.

Stats by FreddyB, Descriptive Text from WookieePedia.
Image copyright LucasArts.
Any complaints, writs for copyright abuse, etc should be addressed to the Webmaster FreddyB.