Creatures D6 / Thala-siren (Pinniped Amphibi

Name: Thala-siren
Classification: Mammal
Average height: 5.4 meters
Skin color: Grey, Pink
Eye color: Black
Distinctions: Green milk
Homeworld: Unknown (recently seen on Ahch-To)
Habitat: Coastal

Dexterity: 2D
Perception: 2D
Strength: 4D

Special Abilities

Butt: While not an aggressive creature, Thala-Sirens are capable of powerful head butts to defend their young, this does STR damage.

Milk: Females Thala-Sirens, which were known as sea sows, produce a nutritious green milk for their young which is often harvested by inhabitants of Acho-to.

Move: 3 (on land), 15 (in water)
Orneriness: 1D

Description: Thala-sirens were large pinnipeds, found on the planet Ahch-To, among other watery worlds. Characterized by their udders, large flippers, and long snout, they were found basking on the cliffs of the sacred Temple Island, the site of the first Jedi Temple, when Rey traveled to the island to find Jedi Master Luke Skywalker. They were docile mammals who were not hunted and thus did not fear the natives of the island. They enjoyed sunning themselves along the coastal rocks of the island.
The females, which were known as sea sows, produced a nutritious green milk for their young. The milk was also harvested by Luke Skywalker and the native Lanai as a food source. Their docile nature meant they were not scared of people like Skywalker approaching for their milk, which proved to be a vital food source during his exile.

During the war between the First Order and the Resistance, thala-siren green milk was exported to Bubo Wamba Family Farms on the planet Batuu, who sold it at the Milk Stand in Black Spire Outpost. The thala-siren became part of a less common logo for Bubo Wamba Family Farms which was featured on their Novelty Drink Vessel.

Stats by FreddyB, Descriptive Text from WookieePedia.
Image copyright LucasArts.

Any complaints, writs for copyright abuse, etc should be addressed to the Webmaster FreddyB.