Description: The CX Dagger vessel was used by the Clone X trooper division of the Galactic Empire in around 18 BBY. It was dagger-shaped and featured twin red-colored engines in the back. It could be remotely-controlled by a computer built in the arms of the Clone X troopers' armor, with features including providing a long-range communications boost to the assassins. It also possessed stealth functions that could hide the ship from sensors. CX-2 used one such starship as a transport to the planet Teth. During the skirmish on Wayland, Dr. Royce Hemlock took CX-2's remote device to summon a CX Dagger vessel to take himself, Commander Scorch and Omega from Tantiss Base, only for Hunter and Crosshair to shoot both its engines, causing the vessel to crash.
