Description: Morrigan Corde was a Human female who served as an Imperial Intelligence agent before and during the Sith–Imperial War and later a Moff in the Moff High Council of the new Galactic Empire around 137 ABY under the persona of Nyna Calixte. While out in the field, she had a chance meeting with Kol Skywalker, a member of the Jedi Council. The pair fell in love, married and had a son, Cade. However, claiming that the Empire recalled her back into service, Morrigan left her new family when Cade was still a toddler. Shortly afterward, she abandoned her true identity for approximately two decades, assuming the persona of Nyna Calixte.

As Calixte, Corde became the Director of Imperial Intelligence, and was later appointed a Moff. She entered into a marriage with fellow Moff Rulf Yage, and they had a daughter, Gunn. However, the marriage would prove to be short-lived, and Calixte entered into an affair with another Moff, the more powerful Morlish Veed.

When the One Sith approached the Empire in 128 ABY offering to help in the Empire's war against the Galactic Federation of Free Alliances, they did so through Calixte. She manipulated the other Moffs into accepting the Sith's offer, then plotted with Veed to place him on the Imperial throne. However, her plan was foiled when Darth Krayt claimed the throne for himself.

In 137 ABY, she "reactivated" her Morrigan Corde persona to help keep Cade Skywalker from being turned to the dark side of the Force by the Sith. She also began to feed information to Roan Fel to undermine the Sith efforts to enforce their absolute rule throughout the galaxy and win back Fel's trust.

Personality and traits

Nyna Calixte exhibited astute political acumen, and was seen by many as manipulative. Indeed, Darth Maladi noted that if she was Force-sensitive, her manipulative personality would have made her a good Sith under Darth Sidious. Calixte was cold and calculating, with a ruthlessness that was matched only by her ambition. She was the one who manipulated the Moff Council into allying with the Sith, and was seen as the person behind Morlish Veed's political ambitions to become Emperor. However, knowing that Darth Krayt was going to assume the throne, she was also the person who warned Emperor Roan Fel about the coup in 130 ABY, thus betraying the Sith. She also displayed a lack of trust towards both the Sith, especially Darth Maladi, and her own lover, Morlish Veed. Calixte's former brother-in-law, Nat Skywalker, noted that she was extremely secretive about herself.

Her fierce, calculating intelligence made her one of the most dangerous people in the galaxy and a match even for the Sith. She was the one who realized that Darth Krayt was going to seize power for himself and she therefore warned Emperor Fel about the upcoming coup against him. This makes her the true instigator of the conflict that followed in which she also played a great role. She spent the next seven years trying to overthrow the Sith and even tried to save Emperor Fel when she learnt he was in danger.

Calixte/Corde refused to let anyone get close to her emotionally, and that extended to her relationship with her children. She had little to no part in her daughter Gunn's upbringing, with Gunn's father, Rulf, being her primary caregiver. For her part, Gunn despised her mother, even going so far as to call her a "nasty old rancor." Her relationship with her son Cade was practically non-existent, having left him and his father, Kol, when Cade was around two years old. However, when she found out that Cade had survived the Massacre at Ossus and was being sought after by the Sith, she reactivated her Morrigan Corde persona for the sole purpose of rescuing him. Because the sight of him would threaten to overtake her emotions, she refused to be near him both times she had located him. Cade, for his part, assumed his mother was long dead, and was shocked to discover otherwise. As for her relationship with Kol Skywalker, she has proven to have fallen in love with him, reasoning that, despite her personality, he still loved her. Whether she truly loved Rulf Yage is unknown, but she did tell him the truth about herself and said she didn't expect his forgiveness for what she had done, meaning she at least hoped to make things right between them.

By her own admission, Corde had some success in shielding her thoughts from Force users. In her guise as Corde, she exhibited knowledge of hand-to-hand combat when she helped Jor Torlin defeat the thugs on the Wheel. Working as an intelligence agent, Calixte was multilingual, capable of understanding Bocce, Huttese, High Galactic, Gran, and Twi'leki, in addition to Basic.

Equipment

As Morrigan Corde, she had two distinguishing pieces of equipment; the first being her communication devices, and the second being her choker containing the holo of her family. Her comm devices were small, flat, circular white patches located on her face, and there were two of them: one under her left eye, and the other on her chin. The patch on her left cheek had a line attached to her left ear, and the one on her chin had a line attached to her bottom lip.

Morrigan wore the choker around her neck, and she often displayed the contents when she was alone. However, she did show the holo to Cade's associates when they doubted her claim as to being Cade's mother. Although the holo was dismissed as fake by Jariah Syn, Chak confirmed the holo was real, having worked around the Jedi Temple on Ossus around the time period the holo was taken.

She also kept a blaster and a jetpack concealed within one of her bags. Thanks to this, she survived an assassination attempt by her former lover, Morlish Veed.

On difficult missions, such as when she broke into the Sith Temple on Coruscant to rescue Cade Skywalker, Morrigan carried a heavy assault blaster rifle.
