Special Abilities:

Sturdiness: Vintians were in high demand because of their extreme sturdiness which included being able to survive in the void of space for up to 2 hours without harm. Vintians could decide whether or not they were magnetically sealed, giving them protection from wounds and capable of deflecting blaster fire. Giving them a bonus +3D to resist all damage.

Navigators: Vintians were also known for their excellent navigation skills. This gives them a bonus +1D to their Astrogation skill.

Story Factors:
Vint is Home: Vintians rarely participated in space travel or commercial spaceflight operations respectively as they preferred to remain settled on Vint.
Complex Language: The Vintian complex language could only be spoken by those without a mouth.

Description: Geode was a Vintian male who acted as the navigator of the transport starship Vessel alongside the pilot Leox Gyasi and copilot Affie Hollow. He resembled a tall, dark gray, flinty, flaky rock. According to Gyasi, Geode's true name could only be pronounced by those without a mouth. The Vessel was transporting Jedi to the Starlight Beacon for its dedication when the Great Hyperspace Disaster struck.

Biography
In the year 232 BBY, Geode acted as the navigator of the transport starship Vessel alongside his crewmates, the pilot Leox Gyasi and copilot Affie Hollow. The Vessel was assigned to transport four Jedi to the Starlight Beacon for its dedication. The Padawan Reath Silas was confused by Geode's nature, but Jedi Knight and Wayseeker Orla Jareni gave him a friendly greeting. Geode was motionless as he produced the coordinates to navigate the ship away from Coruscant. As the Vessel traveled through hyperspace, Silas was startled to see Geode in the mess hall and wondered how the Vintian had moved or been moved from the cockpit to that location. Geode was present as Silas and Hollow discussed the Jedi and celibacy. Later in the cockpit, Gyasi received explanations about the Jedi from Hollow and Geode, specifically their interpersonal relationships.

As the journey continued, Gyasi noticed that something was wrong with hyperspace traffic and the directions in which other ships were traveling. When Gyasi asked Geode if he had also noticed the readouts, Geode was ominously silent. A disaster struck when the transport freighter Legacy Run collided with a Nihil Stormship deliberately placed in its path by Marchion Ro, the Eye of the Nihil. The Vessel had to act quickly as they tried to avoid the debris spread across the hyperlanes, but the ship was struck despite their best efforts. When Gyasi realized it had come from a passenger craft, he said in his frustration he wished it had been "any damn rock out there in space," then quickly told Geode that he meant no offense, and Geode silently indicated that none was taken. During the battle with the Drengir and Nihil aboard the Amaxine Space Station, Geode saved Silas's life by stopping him from being sucked into the vacuum of space.

In 230 BBY, Geode and the rest of the Vessel crew picked up Jareni and fellow Jedi Elzar Mann, whom she had been helping in his struggle against the dark side of the Force, for transport to Starlight Beacon. Mann at first assumed Geode was simply a rock with a lifelike presence in the Force, making him assume it was a sacred plinth of some kind, and remained confused after Jareni explained Geode was a living being, assuming she was testing him. It was only when Geode was suddenly a meter behind him as he stood outside the Vessel that Mann realized Vintians were a living species.

Personality and traits

Geode looked like a tall, dark gray rock, with a flinty and flaky surface that sparkled slightly in the light of hyperspace. Hollow described Geode as initially shy before he got to know a being, while Gyasi described Geode as a wild man and a party animal except when it came to the business of navigation. Geode frequently flirted with women of various species, having a reputation as being "on the prowl" to Leox Gyasi and Affie Hollow. Despite anatomical incompatibility between Vintians and humans, Geode flirted with Pikka Adren aboard Starlight Beacon even in front of her husband Joss Adren.
